

How to Write a Fairy Tale Adaptation	Due By . . .
Know the classic story and tell it often.
Decide on a change to improve the story.
Make the change lead to other changes so the whole story fits together.
Make a character with traits and wants who runs into trouble.
Tell the story in two or three scenes (Small Moment stories).
Story-tell or act out the first scene, filling in lifelike details. Then write the scenes.
With narration, give a backstory at the start and stitch scenes together.
