Lunch Time!

Beginning in fourth and fifth grade kids should be able to go out to lunch. First it prepares kids for when they get older and have to buy food. Also it isn't fair if only a few schools let kids out to lunch so all should, and last (but not least) some kids including me work harder when there is a reward like going out to lunch.

be able to go out to lunch. One reason is because for some kids they work harder when there's a reward like going out to lunch. For example, 21 out of 25 kids said they've been stuck on a piece of school work but they tried even harder so they could go out to lunch. Also not only can it help before kids go out to lunch, it also helps them get their energy out so they can focus. This shows beginning in fourth and fifth grade kids should be able to go out to lunch.

Another reason beginning in fourth and fifth grade kids should be able to go out to lunch is because it prepares kids for when <sup>they</sup> get older and have to buy food and other things like that.

For example Leah from class 4-303 said once her mom asked her to buy something and she said, "I didn't complain because it was just like going out to lunch!" Also whenever my mom asks my sister to buy something she never complains because she's always going out to lunch and if she didn't she'd be complaining <sup>is</sup> ~~gore~~ (like she usually is). Now you see starting in fourth and fifth grade kids should be able to go out to lunch.

And finally it <sup>fair if</sup> isn't only one school allows kids so all should. Imagine if you always wanted to go out to lunch but your school never let ~~even~~ though you were mature enough and could handel it. Then one day your school announced that you were allowed to go out to lunch. You became overjoyed skipping through the streets buying things with your friends. Another example is I have a cousin in 4th grade and she can't go out to lunch. And if you ask me I would <sup>be</sup> pretty embarrassed if I was a 9th grader and I saw a 4th grader going out to lunch. This shows starting in fourth and fifth grade kids should <sup>be</sup> able to go out to lunch.

Beginning in fourth and fifth grade kids should be able to go out to lunch. And <sup>PS 30 kids</sup> you know it can help you with your school work, and fourth and fifth graders <sup>who</sup> don't go out to lunch you know you should be!
