SESSION 7 ACTIVE ENGAGEMENT

The Boston Massacre was a key event in the Revolutionary War.

- It was a key event because it was a violent result of problems between the colonists and England.
- It was a key event because people could use it to make others mad enough to fight.
- It was a key event because it was the last straw before the start of the war.

The Boston Massacre was a key event because people could use it to make others mad enough to fight. Paul Revere made an etching of the Massacre that showed the British soldiers killing the colonists on purpose, but this wasn't totally true. The etching wasn't a completely true version of the Boston Massacre, but Paul Revere used it to make people angry enough to join the revolution.
